Entered in the postoffice at Manchester, Vt., as second class matter.

In this issue of The Journal appears the first installment of "Barnstorming at the Front," the interesting story of the work of the Misses Hoyt among the soldiers in France.

Elsewhere in this issue appears the report of the Factory Point National Bank. This report is one that should be read by every business man in this section as it shows them the strength of a local institution that means so much to the business life of a community. Careful and conservative, but always obliging and friendly, the Factory Point National Bank today occupies a most enviable position in the banking business in this State.

Albert Liedtke met with a painful and severe accident last Saturday evening while returning to his home in this village on his bicycle. The night was very dark particularly as there were no street lights on and Mr. Liedtke was on his way from his work at the Equinox House and while going down the hill by the Strong place he was passed by an automobile going toward the village at a very high rate of speed and with very glaring headlights. The auto passed at the bridge and threw out a cloud of dust which momentarily obscured things, so that in passing Mr. Liedtke ran into a conveyance being driven by Julian Shaw but on which Mr. Liedtke says there were no lights. The force of the impact threw Mr. Liedtke off and he struck on his face, painfully injuring him.

ROBERT FROST IN ARLINGTON

Arlington has something at last to match with Stratton's memories of the Daniel Webster visit and address, for Robert Frost, the poet, has visited Arlington and spoken there. There is, however, something quaint in comparing the traditional bombastic presence of the oratorical Webster with the utter sincerity and spontaneity of Mr. Frost. To the large and breathlessly attentive audience which gathered at Mrs. Gilchrist's house to hear him, he read poem after poem as though he were that moment composing them, as though they were as new to him as anyone. And the people before him, never taking their eyes from his face, listened as though their lives depended on their catching every syllable uttered by that quiet, humorous, sincere voice; for it is to the word sincere that one comes back always in speaking of Mr. Frost.

The members and friends of the Poetry Discussion Class know now that his personality, like his poetry, is the outward sign and symbol of a deep and constant communion with truth.

Mr. Frost read first, that inimitably profound poem, Mending Wall, which means more every time it is heard or read. Beside Mending Wall from "North of Boston," Mr. Frost read The Death of the Hired Man; The Mountain and the Black Cottage from "Mountain Interval; The Road Not Taken; The Telephone; Birches and the Cow in Apple Time; the last a delicious bit of humor which tells of the Bacchic revels of the cow who breaks through the fences and eats the wind fall under the trees. From "A Boy's Will" Mr. Frost read "To the Thawing Wind," Mowing and The Tuft of Flowers.

The next meeting of the class will be held in October, day to be decided upon later, when definite plans for a permanent society will be decided upon. Miss Rittenhouse presents the following list of officers for consideration:

President, Madison G. Bates; vice president, Sarah N. Cleghorn; secretary, Halley Phillips Gilchrist; treasurer, Dorothy Canfield Fisher.

"Island" in the Air.

Three miles south of the Mesa Encabada in Mexico is a splendid specimen of fantastic erosion—an "island" in the air; a rock with overhanging sides nearly 400 feet high and 70 acres in area on the fairly level top, indented with countless bays, notched with dizzy chasms. The greater part of the island overhangs the sea like a huge mushroom, and on the top stands a town which for artistic charm, ethnological interest, and romantic history has no peer. This little town of Ancoma is one of the pre-historic Pueblo architecture. It was only with inconceivable labor this island town in the air was built. It was reached by a mere trail up the stem of the "mushroom." The age of the island is not known, except that it was already old in 1540.

"THE SHACKLES OF IRELAND"

Why is Erin left chained when the fetters are stricken from Poles, Armenians, Czechs, Slavs, Finns, Chinese and Ukrainians?

JUSTICE WESLEY O. HOWARD

In a smashing, tremendously inspiring article in the Sunday New York Herald of Sept. 28, asks why the phrase "Making the world safe for democracy" does not apply to Ireland.

"If the deadly Article X. of the League of Nations is adopted by the United States Senate," says Justice Howard, "the doom of Ireland is sealed. This atrocity rivets forever the shackles of subjugation on the limbs of Ireland. The children of the Gael never can hope again!"

Ireland's struggles are vain unless America saves her now.

Fly Model Planes With the Wind.

As regards the flying of a model plane, the beginner has much to learn, writes William Maclean in the Every-day Engineering magazine. It should always be remembered that while it occurs to the average person that a model should be flown into the wind this in reality is not the case; a model should always be flown with the wind.

Another point to remember is that a scale or reproduction model can never be a long distance flyer as are types of stick models. Further, a reproduction model must necessarily have a propeller or tractor screw out of proportion, as a screw to scale is not capable of delivering the necessary thrust to fly a model which must necessarily be too heavy for the thrust developed.
